

Council meets Thursday

Gage Supported in Open Meeting

by GERALD HASLAM
News Editor

At yesterday's Open Meeting a majority of some one thousand students present voted for the reinstatement of Sandy Gage as Editor-in-Chief of the McGill Daily.

No action is expected to be taken until Thursday night's Council meeting.

The Open Meeting was the second in ten days, and the second which demanded a reversal of Council's decision to fire Gage.

This time, however, there could be little doubt regarding the meeting's constitutionality. A motion was passed after a vote by all those in attendance. The doors of the Union Ballroom remained open for the 38 minutes that the meeting lasted.

Unlike the last open meeting, the gathering was orderly, and speakers could be heard. The only interruptions came when statements were applauded or booed.

Motion to reinstate

When the minutes of the previous meeting had been approved, the first speaker was Jack Donegani, B.A.3. Donegani moved to 'reinstate Sandy Gage immediately'. The motion further stated: 'that immediately be interpreted so that the Tuesday, November 29th issue of the McGill Daily be published under his editorship and that any further action on this issue be suspended until the report of the CUP Commission.'

Lionel Chetwynd, BCL3, spoke against the motion, asking of the assembly "Are you afraid of what the CUP Report will say?" Chetwynd cautioned the students not to "put pressure on the commissioners" by passing any motion in relation to Gage or the Daily. "Any of you who know the phrase sub judice will understand what I mean," Chetwynd declared. He then proposed an amendment that provided for tabling of the motion.

Sub-Amendment

Bill Lenihan, M.Sc.1, immediately moved a sub-amendment which deleted Chetwynd's amendment and asked for return to the original motion.

George Radwanski, B.A.3, stated that, in his opinion, "the best way to settle this is by referendum." Richard Brecher, B.A.4, asked the Students' Society to "get back to a neutral position" by reinstating Gage.

It was finally moved that the question be put, and the vote, first on the sub-amendment, then on the motion, was taken. In both cases about sixty percent of those present voted in favour, and the motion was declared to have carried.

Council to meet

Students' Society President Jim McCoubrey stated after the meeting that a meeting of Council has been called, and will take place on Thursday night. Regarding the possibility of reinstating Gage in time for him to produce this newspaper, the President said he felt the decision of the Open Meeting should come before the whole Council, and not just the Executive Committee.

McCoubrey stressed in his statement to the Daily that the Executive Committee should be used to make decisions normally reserved for Council only in emergency conditions.

"There is urgency in this situation," McCoubrey said, "but since the Council is readily available, I think it in everyone's best interest if Council discusses the issue in full."

For that reason, McCoubrey added, interim editor Mark Feifer would be asked to continue at least until Council had reached a decision.

Internal Vice-President Ian McLean said he thought the meeting was very well run. "The feelings of the students were very clear to me", he told the Daily.

Gage questioned

Ex-editor Gage was asked if he would accept reinstatement while the CUP report was pending. "Of course that would depend on the conditions of the reinstatement", he replied.

When a number of students were questioned after the meeting, some expressed confusion. "I'm not sure I knew what I was voting for", said one. This view was not widespread, however. Many members of the voting audience were jubilant. "This will show Council exactly what we mean to say", a smiling co-ed told the Daily.

Interim Editor Mark Feifer held a meeting of his staff in the early afternoon and told them they would continue to work on the Daily until Council relieved them of their duties. "Our job is to put out the paper", he said. "We intend to go on doing just that."

Council's meeting is on Thursday at 7 pm in the Ballroom.

CUP commission delayed

The CUP commission inquiry has been delayed because of the illness of the Chairman, Tim Foley of Halifax.

Foley complained of severe abdominal pains early yesterday morning, but after treatment was permitted to begin the work of the Commission. However, after the Commission had been in session for only about ten minutes, he collapsed and was taken to the hospital.

Bookstore — Complaints

The Bookstore Committee is calling for student complaints and suggestions about Bookstore service or prices.

The Committee will deal with cases of overpricing, methods of theft, lack of courtesy, delays or mistakes in ordering texts, and lack of efficiency. All complaints or suggestions should be left at the Union switchboard in care of the Chairman, Bookstore Investigatory Committee.

Will return today

Apparently, his condition is such that he will be able to return to his job with the Commission today. The CUP inquiry is concerned with the circumstances surrounding the dismissal of Sandy Gage from his post as Editor-in-Chief of the McGill Daily.

At the time of Foley's collapse, the Commission was about to hear from its first witness, Don Sellar, chairman of CUP. Other witnesses scheduled for yesterday were Sandy Gage, Jim McCoubrey, Arnold Aberman, Murray Segal, Mark Feifer, Ellen Roseman, Peter Allnutt, and Marc Raboy.

Late Bulletin

At press time it was reported that Commission Chairman Tim Foley is sufficiently recovered to attend the delayed hearing this morning. The hearing, which will be closed to all visitors, begins at 10 am in the Union Boardroom. No further statement regarding the time of release for the CUP Report has been received.

Today's the long awaited day! Don't forget to check the magic sheets in the McConnell Engineering Building with the names of your computerized dates. (Remember, the Engineering Fall informal is coming up Saturday — So's Christmas — soon!).

Scholarships Awarded

Law

Two McGill law students have been awarded scholarships covering full tuition fees for one year. The recipients are David Doubilet and Sean Harrington. The awards were presented by Charles Wayland and Phillipe de Grandpré, President and Vice-President respectively of the McGill Law Graduates' Association. The Association has made these awards annually since 1963.

Business

The Graduate School of Business of McGill University yesterday held a public presentation of scholarship awards in the Stewart Biological Sciences Building. The recipients of the awards:

—James Leslie, who became the first McGill recipient of the Seagram Business Fellowship, inaugurated this year. The presentation of the scholarship was made by Charles R. Bronfman, President of the House of Seagram Ltd.

—Michael de Pellegrin received the H.E. Herschorn Graduate Fellowship presented by Dr. F. R. Terroux, Associate Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research.

—Michael Farrugia received from J.A. McVicker, Vice-President of Abex Industries of Canada Ltd., the Abex Industries Scholarship.

—James Wessel was presented the Chemcell Scholarship from C.S. Malone, President of Chemcell Limited.

We Couldn't Have Said It Better, Patrick

The idea that today's open meeting can unseat the Daily editor is based on serious misconceptions both about the powers vested in the Students' Society under the present constitution, and about the relationship of the Daily to the Students' Council and, ultimately, to the Students' Society.

To the best of our knowledge, the only authority vested directly in the students is the right to amend by referendum the Students' Society constitution (Article VIII, 6). For while "the Students' Society is an association of students formed to exercise control of the student activities" (Art. II), "the governing authority of the Students' Society" is "vested in the Students' Council" (Art. VIII, 1). While the Society may, at its own or the president's discretion, hold meetings to discuss any matters of interest to it, the decisions made at these meetings constitutionally are without authority. Certainly, any motions passed by the Societly will have a certain amount of influence on the Students' Council. On the other hand, these motions have absolutely no legal force.

The Students' Society is a representative, not a direct democracy. This is eminently sensible. Three hundred students, a Students' Society quorum, represent 2.5 per cent of the student body. The Students' Council, elected by the whole of the Students' Society, represents the whole of the student body. This quorum of 300 should not, and in fact does not, have the power to over-rule the representatives of the students. On page 36 of the student Handbook it is said that "the Council is responsible to the students through bi-annual open meetings and referendums of the Students' Society". Constitutionally, this simply is not so. Whoever wrote this interpretive analysis of the constitution had not read it very closely.

The second area of confusion involves the question of who, precisely, is responsible for the Daily. The governing authority of the Students' Society is vested in Council. Even more explicitly, "The Students' Council shall be responsible for the management and control of the McGill Daily through the Editor-in-Chief" (Art. VIII, 6). Opponents of the editor — or of any other chairman of a campus activity — have every right to discuss their grievances at an open meeting, but the meeting has no constitutional right to alter his status. And while motions passed by the Students' Society will receive the attention of the Students' Council, we consider that Council's acceptance of our statement of policy less than two weeks ago indicates that they are not at present ready to replace us. In an editorial October 28 we suggested that a vote against the Editor at an Open Meeting would constitute a vote of non-confidence in the Council which so recently expressed support for him, and might conceivably result in Council's resignation. Our position is unchanged. We consider that we hold our mandate from Council and from no one else, and we intend to continue putting out a paper until Council asks us to stop. Therefore we will not attend today's meeting. We will not support its pretensions to legitimacy by defending our policies before it. The only Daily representative at the meeting will be a reporter.

Council's position with respect to the meeting is quite different. For while nothing written in the constitution makes the SC responsive to the wishes of the student body as expressed at an Open Meeting, in precedent the SC always has been. An analogous situation occurred at Sir George last Wednesday, when a Students' Society vote against entering UGEQ would have forced Council's resignation.

Germany and elections

Dear Sir:

It appears that our new Daily has acquired a talented and analytic assortment of editorial writers. Their effort in the Friday edition was reminiscent of the half-baked attempts at editorializing that the Gage group specialized in, except that now Mr. Feifer and associates are using a new brand of acid in which to dip their pens.

I am willing to contend that the person responsible for Friday's editorial has no more knowledge of the present status of political or social thought in West Germany than that which he gets from reading his morning newspaper. His sole purpose is to rekindle the fear which we all have about extreme racism and its outcome, not to enlighten or give an informed analysis of a complex situation.

He chooses to ignore completely certain vital facts.

The youth of modern Germany have little or no interest in patriotic table thumping, military posturing or beer hall oratory against Jews or any other minority. The large majority of middle class citizens who make up most of the population still all too vividly remember the results of the last exercise at nationalism and, like their children, are more interested in solid government and the freedom to live successfully in the midst of economic prosperity. They are, indeed, much closer in their social and political outlook to the average Canadian family than one might expect. The West Germans of today travel much more than they ever have, especially to the other countries in Europe. As such, they are in large part a supra-national, Common-market oriented people, rather than the embittered, depression-ridden populace that embraced Nazism in the 1930's.

From a military point of view, the situation in modern Europe is such, that with multi-megatonned armies stationed at either side of their country, the West Germans are unlikely to try anything that might even remotely upset the delicate balance of power. The presence of the 42 Soviet divisions in East Germany and the western frontier of the U.S.S.R. will make certain of that. Economically, West Germany is in large measure dependent on foreign investment, especially by the United States. The number of subsidiaries of American companies in West Germany rivals the number in Canada and they, no doubt, exert a considerable influence on the general direction of government policy.

The list of examples could be much longer, but even these few examples sufficiently show that one would have to scrape very low in the barrel to come up with parallels between present day Germany and the Germany of the late 1920's and 30's.

Politically, there are important considerations as well. Kurt Georg Kiesinger was chosen above the other candidates for chancellor because he represented closer ties with Gaullist France and a non-nuclear stance for Germany. His Nazi past was and is his major obstacle to complete acceptance by his party, not his major attribute as you would like to suggest. It turns out that Mr. Kiesinger was not a concentration camp overseer or top aid to uncle Adolph as the scare headlines imply, but rather a minor party functionary in the ministry of information who became disillusioned early in the game by the concept of the "big lie". This same Mr. Kiesinger is now attempting to form a "grand coalition" with the avowedly anti-Nazi and left oriented Social Democrats and his main obstacle again appears to be his former Nazi affiliations.

Another fact that must be considered is the political system existing in West Germany. Although a party like the National Democratic Party, which claims to be right wing but states emphatically that it is not neo-Nazi, obtains only 7% of the popular vote, it automatically receives a share of the seats available in the house. If in Quebec, a minority party like the Ralliement National or the RIN receives 7% of the vote, it may still not have sufficiently concentrated support in one region to win a single seat in the provincial legislature.

In any case, no one is trying to whitewash Kurt Georg Kiesinger or explain away the gains made by the NPD as the results of a group of malcontents. They are, however, trying to understand the phenomena of the resurgence of the right and understanding a problem is a step the right way.

Yet, the editorial on Friday made no attempt at understanding or at the analysis of a complex situation. Instead, it pandered openly to an emotional approach which might be comprehensible when seen in the context of McGill's ethnic composition, but which is certainly not justifiable or honest. As far as intelligent editorial writing goes, Friday's effort was a pretty poor show.

J. Sievers, BSc II

In view of your absorbing reference to McGill's "ethnic" composition, you're a perfect example of what we were talking about. Thank you for taking the time to write. — Ed.

Roses

Dear Sir:

I am writing to express my support for the present McGill Daily staff and approval of the work that they have been doing since November 23rd.

Perhaps through naivete, I cannot understand why some say that you are merely the mouthpiece of the Students' Council. Your task seems to be an obvious one — to provide McGill students with at least some inkling of what is going on — and, as such, is hardly reprehensible. Being ignorant of the finer intrigues of campus politics, I cannot comment on Mr. Ron Johnston's insinuations about the origins of your staff, but the fact that there is a Daily at all — even if too tame for some — should be a cause for gratitude on the part of most of us. For how many meetings were spoilt, news-items missed, and advertisers, annoyed through lack of a Daily on November 21st and 22nd?

As for the issue over the dismissal of Sandy Gage, I must confess original sympathy with the decision of the Students' Council. At this point, however, I am merely confused and support neither side. What seems most regrettable, to someone in my position, is the rancour engendered by the conflict. So many bitter words are being hurled about and attitudes are hardening that there seems to be little prospect of agreement no matter what happens in the future. Is not the general unity and respectability of the student body as a whole of paramount importance?

An unfortunate manifestation of this growing intransigence in attitudes is the ASUS publication Free Press. The very name of this newspaper — at least in the present situation — implies definite bias on the part of its editorial staff.

In view of this, I regret the support given it by the ASUS; the ASUS supposedly represents all students in Arts and Science and, in my opinion, has acted rather precipitately in taking sides on an issue that obviously does not command anything approaching unanimity among its members.

I am sorry that former Daily staffers have felt that they must oppose their successors who are merely trying to carry on the publication that is most associated with McGill: these same people are the first to deride the present Daily staff for mistakes. It is a mystery to me how anyone could regard cooperating with an interim editorial board as treacherous to the cause of freedom of the press, etc. A more appropriate time for boycotts and cries of injustice should seem to be after the final, definitive CUP decision, not before. The affair being now in a temporary state of suspension, it would be a courteous gesture for people to withhold gibes against a few hastily assembled volunteers who are — to my mind at least — by virtue of the very paper that they are producing, working for the benefit of the student body as a whole.

In conclusion, then, it is my hope that the present Daily staff receive the credit for their efforts that they deserve. Even if their writing might lack the raciness and fervour of discontent, characteristic of Mr. Gage's paper, the fact that there are people willing to keep us informed is in our best interests.

These are the opinions of a presently uncommitted bystander: criticisms of them would be most respectfully received.

Civil war declared

I have been appalled by the turn the Daily 'dispute' (for want of a better term) has taken in the last few days. With the appearance of the ASUS Free Press, the debate has become overtly political, with Leftists so-called gravitating to the Free Press and Conservatives to the Daily. Of course, it is all too easy to label these polarizations (continued on page 4) left or right, and, indeed, the issue has become obscured by basic differences in political ideology which should have little to do with the issue at hand. Hence, Mr. Arthur Rabinovitch's plea for politically-oriented S.C. Representatives strikes me as singularly inappropriate at this time. For crying out loud! The last thing I want (and I trust I am not alone in this hope) is a Representative for Commerce who got on the S.C. because he happened to have the right political leanings. Or, worse, that a Representative should have imposed on him the political views of the faculty he represents, whether he agrees with them or not.

The Montreal Star (Nov. 25th) states: "Its (the ASUS Free Press') fortunes... will tend to indicate how deep political divisions at the university are". I am truly sorry that the Daily has become an instrument in the political maelstrom at present engulfing the campus. Of course, it was inevitable, but I hope both the new Daily and the Free Press will refrain from political mud-slinging on all issues. At present only one issue should divide the two papers—whether, in the article on Professor Yong, the Daily committed a breach of journalistic ethics. I hope, despite the efforts of partisans to escalate this war into a Left-Right dogfight, that is the way it will stay.

Finally, let me congratulate you on a Daily that is at last a campus NEWSpaper. The last three issues have been of more interest to me as a rank-and-file McGillian than any consecutive three I can recall for some time. Now, having contributed my two-cents worth, I will retire to a neutral corner to watch the Free Press/Daily civil war.
